While styles and types are important when selecting furniture for aged care and seniors living, the upholstery selections and colours are at least equally critical.

Many models can be used in retirement living and residential aged care but the look and feel is impacted largely by the type of upholstery.

The industry has advanced very rapidly in the last few years and many moisture barrier fabrics are now digitally printed in Australia and some are available in custom colours and designs. These can be printed on a range of base cloths which all have varying properties which are recommended for different areas depending on the level of care.

Other moisture barrier fabrics are woven which have a backing, such as cryptons. These are all very functional for seniors living and aged care.
